Shortly after the London dockworkers went on strike an attempt was made to get the Lisbon stevedores to agree to a one-hour strike, to express sympathy and solidarity with the London strikers. However, 25X1X a canvass of the Lisbon stevedores revealed that ninety percent of them were opposed to the plan; consequently, no action was taken. 25X1X expressed surprise at the fact that such a large percentage of stevedores 25X1X were against the gesture because the Portuguese Communist Party (PCP) has always had a strong organization within the Lisbon dockworkers' circles. 25X1X for the stevedores' unwillingness to act as being due to fear of police reprisals.
